A Life of Service and Grace
“Mom, did you hear about the shooting at a college?”

My twelve-year-old daughter was the first to tell me the news of the Virginia Tech massacre of April 16, 2007. When she checked in with me after school, my daughter told me about the shootings. I had spent the day in meetings and hadn't yet heard the news. As a university administrator, the news was shocking, to say the least. All of us on university and college campuses around the world could not help but think, “What if that happened here?”

Like other institutions, we met for hours in the wake of the Virginia Tech tragedy reviewing SBU’s safety and security measures, and we issued a statement to reassure the students that our security team would be joined by the Bolivar police force in protecting our campus. The city of Bolivar was generous in offering an extra presence during a student-led prayer vigil and promised extra patrols on campus for a few days. Other security measures to further protect our community are planned and you will learn more about these on page 27 of this magazine.

As we celebrate the end of a great year at SBU, we continue to pray for the Virginia Tech students, faculty, staff, and families of the victims. No doubt the usual celebrations at the end of the school year and at graduation were more somber for the Hokies this year.

In this issue of SBU Life, you will read about the legacy of excellence inspiring our Pi Kappa Delta team founded by Dr. Bob Derryberry. The West Point Military Academy may have the long gray line, but SBU has the long green line, which you will learn more about in the feature story about our PKD team! Other stories highlight the excellence of our alumni families, our students, faculty, and staff, and our newest graduates. In addition, you will read a memorial to a beloved First Lady of SBU, in whose memory a campaign has begun for the library.

We have begun a new feature of the magazine to acknowledge that our readers are among our very best recruiters. As you flip through the following pages, you will find a purple bookmark and postcards asking you to “Spread the Word” about SBU. As alumni and friends of the University, you have the opportunity to influence the next generation of Christian scholars by encouraging them to attend SBU, where we feel they will experience one of the highest quality and affordable Christ-centered academic programs available.

If you haven’t been back to campus in awhile, I hope you will put Homecoming (October 5-6, 2007) on your calendar this year. The newly renovated Jim Mellers Center, home of the Courts Redford College of Theology and Ministry is beautiful, and there are many other building projects you might not have seen since your time at SBU. We are planning several new events as well as the usual favorites for your reunion with old friends and teachers. “There is No Place Like Home: Follow the Purple Brick Road” is the theme, and we think you’ll agree, there is no place like SBU.

I invite you to send in story ideas along with your personal updates and address changes. We like to keep in touch with our alumni and are planning many regional events to re-connect with you, so you won’t want to miss these invitations and the chance to fellowship with SBU alumni and friends in your area. You’ll read about some of these events in this issue.

We strive to make each issue of SBU Life better than the one before, so please do not hesitate to send us your feedback!

As I took one last read through of this magazine from cover to cover, I realized it sums up what SBU has been about since its founding in 1878: A legacy of excellence in academics coupled with an intense passion for building Christ’s kingdom.

SBU Life (USPS 507-500) is published in March, July, September and November. It is distributed free for alumni, parents and friends of Southwest Baptist University by the Office of Marketing & Communications, 1600 University Ave., Bolivar, MO 65613. Periodical postage paid at Bolivar, Mo., and additional mailing offices.

SBU Life highlights the University’s mission: to be a Christ-centered, caring academic community preparing students to be servant leaders in a global society. SBU does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, creed, national origin, gender, age, marital status or disability. Any person having inquiries regarding this may contact Ron Maupin (417) 328-1511.
We Will Stand Guard

“As I write this column, SBU is preparing to begin the 130th school year since our founding in 1878. As president, I am often asked the question, “What is my vision for the University?” My initial response to this question is we must not change our core values or our Baptist identity. We are who we are and who we always have been. We are committed to being the best evangelical Christian university that we can possibly be. We are committed to our Baptist heritage and we are unapologetically Christian. Our primary goal is to be Christ-centered in everything we do. It is our goal to live out our mission statement in our daily activities. We should remind ourselves every day that “SBU is a Christ-centered, caring academic community preparing students to be servant leaders in a global society.” This is who we are and who we always have been, and we must not change.

There are many threats to our very existence today. We live in an increasingly secular world that has very little appreciation for Christian values. Today, we have many challenges, and I must hasten to tell you that if we do not stand guard and if we do not dedicate ourselves to the mission and core values of the University; and if we do not successfully plan and record our goals and objectives, we can fail at any time.

The 2006-2007 academic year has been a great year for SBU. Our students have enjoyed tremendous success this year. Our computer students have excelled in regional and national competitions. Our forensics team has once again captured the Pi Kappa Delta national championship. Phi Beta Lambda members have excelled in state competitions and have represented our university and the College of Business and Computer Science very well. Our cross country and track athletes have had the best year ever and T. Jay Sanderson, once again, has been recognized as an All-American. Our golf team made the NCAA National Tournament. Our theater and music students have entertained the SBU community with outstanding performances all year. The Omnibus, our university paper, won numerous awards, and Alyson Browning, the editor of The Omnibus, served as president of the state wide organization for student newspapers. For the second consecutive year, the SBU missions program received the Courts Redford Award from the North American Mission Board for sending the largest number of students on mission trips. We literally send students, faculty, and staff all over the world to share the gospel.

Our faculty has enjoyed many successes this year. Numerous faculty have published books and articles. Many have presented at conferences and served in leadership roles for various professional organizations. It amazes me how much our faculty accomplishes each year. Another milestone accomplished this year is the creation of the SBU Staff Council. Under the leadership of David Bolton and Allison Blamey, the staff council is successfully operating and is making significant contributions to the SBU campus.

Perhaps the greatest accomplishment this year was the graduation of 328 outstanding students. It always is gratifying to see students accomplish their educational objectives. This is an outstanding graduating class, and they will accomplish many great things.

During the recent honors banquet, SBU Provost, Dr. Gordon Dutile, issued a challenge to our graduates to make a mark on the intellectual world. For many years now, Christians have basically forfeited the intellectual world to secular scholars. This is unfortunate, because Christian scholars have much to offer. Good scholarship and biblical principles go hand-in-hand and we Christian scholars need to make our mark. Dr. Dutile challenged our graduates to go out into the world with a strong Christian worldview and recapture the intellectual world. This graduating class definitely has the ability to make significant contributions to the intellectual world.

Since graduation, I have traveled many miles, and literally to the other side of the world as I recently returned from a trip to Tomsk State University in Siberia, where SBU has entered into an agreement for a student exchange program. We had a productive time at the Southern Baptist Convention’s annual meeting in San Antonio, Texas, where we had the opportunity to re-connect with many of our alumni, meet prospective students and their parents, and share our vision for SBU.

As we conclude our 129th year, I can assure you that Southwest Baptist University is strong and healthy. Yes, we have challenges. However, we will join our hands, our hearts, and our minds during the upcoming summer planning process and we will develop strategic initiatives, goals, and objectives for the next five years that will meet the challenges of today and that will meet future challenges. We will stand guard and we will record our vision so all can see who we are as a Baptist, evangelical, Christ-centered University offering affordable, top quality academic programs for our students.

C. Pat Taylor
President
The Southwest Baptist University spring commencement was held on a beautiful Saturday, May 19, on the Merrill Burnidge Memorial Forum on the Bolivar campus. More than 350 undergraduate and graduate students received their degrees during the ceremony. The commencement address was given by guest speaker Gary Black ’67. Following graduation from SBU, Black was employed by Fireman Insurance Company, located in Northern California, for thirty-five years. Black retired in 2002 as president of claims.

In 2004 Black joined OneBeacon Insurance Company, headquartered in Boston, as managing director. He held this position until his second retirement in December 2006. He has served on numerous corporate and not-for-profit boards and has just completed a ten-year term on the board of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Mill Valley, California. Black and his wife, Jane, also a graduate of SBU, have retired and spend their time at their homes located in Novato, California, and Springfield, Missouri. They have two sons and four grandchildren.

During the ceremony, retiring staff and faculty were recognized and the student recipients of the Life Beautiful Award were named.

Life Beautiful Awards
Mark David Kellogg, a chemistry/chemistry education major, and Whitney Jeanne Prewitt, a psychology major, received the 2007 Life Beautiful Awards. The Life Beautiful Awards are presented annually to an outstanding man and woman in the Southwest Baptist University spring graduating class. The award was established in 1937 by Rosalee Mills Appleby, a career missionary to Brazil.

Staff Recognition for Retirement
Ed Hanna has served as coordinator for the graduate studies program in the St. Louis area for the past thirteen years. Through the years, Hanna has been instrumental in the development of two new locations in Pacific and in the Lindbergh School District, St. Louis. Through his efforts, the SBU graduate education program has grown in the St. Louis area and enrollment from the three sites accounts for approximately forty percent of the total of all graduate education programs.

Hanna received his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from Southeast Missouri State University. He taught social studies and physical education at East Prairie High School, Ste. Genevieve High School and De Soto Public Schools. He served as head football and track coach at East Prairie and Ste. Genevieve and head baseball coach at De Soto. In addition to other duties, Hanna served as assistant principal at De Soto Junior High School and DeSoto High School from 1976 to 1994.

Hanna and his wife have two daughters: Theresa Jane and Lucinda Lee, who received her master’s degree from SBU in 2005.

Faculty Recognition for Retirement
Dr. Eric Moore has been part of the SBU family for over forty years. While employed at SBU, Dr. Moore served as assistant debate coach, directed the SBU alumni program, developed the CAMEO mission program, and served as president of faculty senate. He worked to develop and coordinate the first SBU graduate courses taught over a fiber-optic distance education system in northeast Missouri.

Dr. Moore earned a bachelor of arts degree from Southwest Baptist College in 1970. He earned a master’s degree from Central Missouri State University in clinical audiology in 1975 and a doctorate from the University of Missouri–Columbia in 1992.

He began his professional career at Butler High School in Butler, Missouri, teaching for three years. He has served as pastor and interim pastor for several churches in and around the Polk County area. In 1975, he was hired as an instructor of education at SBU. Since 1996, he has served as professor of education. He has received the SBU Faculty Life Beautiful Award, the SBU Pioneer Mission Award, and the SBU Edwin Lightfoot Outstanding Alumni Award.

Dr. Moore and his wife, Geri, have been married for 38 years. Their daughters, Erica Noyes and Heather Moore, are SBU graduates as well as their son-in-law, Tim Noyes. Dr. Moore and Geri, who recently retired from teaching, have three grandchildren.

Dr. Joanne Vaughan earned a bachelor of science in education and a master of education at the University of Memphis. She completed a Specialist in Educational Administration at Missouri State University. After twenty years of teaching elementary school, Vaughan became the Director of the University Learning Center at SBU in 1985. In 1998, she joined the athletics department as assistant athletics director/academic support and senior women’s administrator. She was advisor to freshmen student-athletes.

“For the past twenty years, I have enjoyed teaching freshmen at SBU and watching the educational process in action. Graduation day is so rewarding when you see former students walk across the stage to receive their degrees. Some come back to visit and share what meant the most to them during their student days at SBU. I am glad that I have been able to stay at SBU to see the maturing of my former students.”

Vaughan and her husband John are members of First Baptist Church, Bolivar, Missouri.

Dr. Etta Sellars is a professor of education at Southwest Baptist University in Mountain View, Missouri. She began her association with SBU in 1999 when she became a member of the faculty as an associate professor of education. In 2004, Dr. Sellars was promoted to professor of education.

Dr. Sellars earned a bachelor of science degree in education from University of Central Arkansas in 1966. She graduated from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary with a master’s degree in 1981 and a doctor of divinity degree in 1983. Also, she earned a doctor of education degree from Indiana State University in 1989. He began his professional career in teaching at Oakland City University in 1983, and later taught at Ouachita Baptist University in Arkadelphia, Arkansas. In 1994, Dr. Sellars joined the SBU faculty as an associate professor of education. In 1997 he became the coordinator of the SBU teacher education program in Mountain View. In 2002, he was promoted to professor of education.

Etta and Jimmy Sellars have a daughter, Marla. They attend First Baptist Church of Mountain View.

The University awarded two honorary doctorates during a formal Founders’ Day chapel program on March 14 in Pike Auditorium. Honorary degree recipients were Norma Tally Bishop ’36 and Charles Edward Graham. Dr. Bob Derryberry, senior professor of communication arts, gave the Founders’ Day address during the chapel service. Bishop was introduced by author Pat Baker, and Graham was introduced by Ron Maupin, SBU vice president for administration.

Norma Tally Bishop, a native of Missouri, was born in a small community east of Lowry City known as Tally Bend. In 1927, Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Tally moved their family of six to Bolivar in order for him to attend Southwest Baptist College (SWBC). Dr. Bishop was nine when she was first introduced to Bolivar.

While living in Bolivar, Bishop graduated from the eighth grade, attended the SWBC Academy for one year and then graduated from Bolivar High School in 1933. While attending the SWBC Academy, Bishop was named the “tiniest” but “happiest” girl on campus. She began her lifelong teaching career when she was 17, while she was completing her undergraduate degree at SWBC. Following graduation in 1936, she continued teaching in rural one-room schools for several years.

In 1936 Norma Tally met Lucas Bishop on a blind date, and they were married one year later. The Bishops raised five children (three of whom attended SWBC): Lucia, Delynn, Zelda, Laurel (deceased) and Vaughn. During her marriage, Bishop was a stay-at-home mother until 1954 when she returned to the classroom. She taught at the elementary school level for eight years. She taught...
English and reading at the secondary level for twenty years and was recognized as a “Master Teacher” during several of those years.

Bishop earned a bachelor’s degree in education graduating cum laude from Southwest Missouri State University in 1959. She worked as an adjunct faculty member at Southwest Baptist University (formerly SWBC) teaching in the education department from 1971 until 1982 when she became a full-time faculty member. During her tenure as an adjunct at SWBC, she completed a master’s degree in education and reading at Central Missouri State University. She finished her teaching career at the International English Institute in Fresno, California, where she taught for seven years.

Bishop is widely traveled having visited the 50 United States and 36 foreign countries. Her mission trips have taken her to Mexico, a Navaho reservation, Korea, Brazil, New Zealand, Siberia and Africa. In addition, she has experienced three Olympic mission trips to Australia, Utah and North Carolina. Church involvement has always been a priority to Bishop. She has taught Sunday school since she was 17 and has held numerous church positions over the years. Currently, Bishop is a member of the SBU National Alumni Board, Redford College Curator Board, Habitat for Humanity Board and Life International-American Mission Board. She is a member of First Baptist Church in Bolivar and works part-time at SBU.

Charles Edward Graham shares the Gospel through music. He is a native of Arkansas, born and raised in the southeast part of the state. He is the fifth of thirteen children raised by his parents, Ollie Graham and the late Willie Graham. Graham attended Southwest Baptist University for two years, and during his second year (1976), he felt God’s call to a full-time ministry. He later transferred to Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, Missouri, to continue his college education. In 1984 he graduated from Rhema Bible Training Center in Broken Arrow, Oklahoma.

Graham’s music ministry has taken him throughout the United States as well as overseas ministering in several countries including England, Scotland, Wales, Norway, Germany, France, Canada, Israel, Africa and South America. In addition, he has ministered at the governor’s mansion in Atlanta, Georgia, and at various prayer breakfasts throughout the United States. Most recently, Graham accepted an invitation by the president of Burundi, Africa, to minister for a week of worship.

God has gifted Graham with the unique ability to minister across denominational, socio-economic and racial lines. He particularly enjoys the opportunity to minister to young people in group settings such as camps and retreats, or one-on-one helping them to develop a more personal relationship with God. Graham has produced eight recordings, including his latest release, You Amaze Me. His repertoire includes contemporary tunes along with favorite standards appealing to a wide range of ages.

Charles Graham Ministries is headquartered in Murrieta, California, where Dr. Graham resides. When he is not traveling, he attends New Covenant Fellowship Church. One of his favorite scripture verses of the Bible is Psalm 40:3 (NAS) “And He put a new song in my mouth, a song of praise to our God; many will see and fear, and will trust in the Lord.”

Founders’ Day Address: Remembering Those Who Led You
By Dr. Bob Derryberry

Thank you, Dr. Taylor, very honored guests, fellow scholars, and colleagues. With the encouragement of a thoughtful and humorous student who recently asked me if I was present at the founding of the University, I approach this moment with excitement, fear, and an increasing sense of senior awareness! But, I am delighted to speak with you about those who have led us at Southwest.

I like to paraphrase Irvin Cobb when he defines a good storyteller as an individual who has a good memory and hopes that others do not. In reflecting upon our founders today, I express gratitude to wonderful friends who have shared many pieces of the SWBC-SBU story during my short decades as a part of the Southwest family. I’m grateful for our university archives where I continue to learn of those who made their entrances and left lasting memories on the stage of this campus and in the lives of thousands.

Significantly, examples of SBU servants and scholars provide a medium for preserving our heritage and giving us inspiration for new dedication to the calling of Christian higher education. Accounts of God’s servants give us perspective. They tell us about who we are and where we have been. They set purposes before us and provide “heart” for our journeys. As professor Daniel Taylor writes: “A genuine story will not leave us alone. It insists sometimes in the most impolite terms on changing us.” The Letter to the Hebrews, chapter 13, speaks clearly of the value of backward reflection to provide focus and inspiration. The passage reads: “Remember those who led you, who spoke the word of God to you; and considering the outcome of their way of life, imitate their faith. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, yes and forever.”

Thus, on Founders’ Day, it is very appropriate for us to ask two questions: Who are those who have led us? And, what qualities did they possess that serve as models or standards for us in 2007?

Of course, we must remember the early founders. But, who were they? What were they really like? You glance at their pictures in our library. Can you describe them? They were only a few years older than most of you when they began translating their “air castles” into reality.

James Maupin was born in 1852. As a young man, he attended the old LaGrange College and later served as pastor of the Ten Mile Church in Lewis County, where he met his future wife, Alice Jane Sta-
He acquired a year of seminary study in Chicago before beginning the dream of building a school with his friend and former college roommate Abner Smith Ingman. During the time that Thomas Edison proudly demonstrated his first practical incandescent bulb and the approaching decade would bring over five million immigrants (including some of your great-great grandparents), to a burgeoning America following the Civil War, J. R. Maupin and Abner Ingman were gathering students and support for a school on six acres of land in Bolivar, Missouri.

Since Maupin was a skillful orator, preacher and debater, he was always in demand for speaking occasions. A talented and insightful builder, he personally supervised the construction of the first building on the new Southwest Baptist campus. He also advocated the extension of rail transportation from Kansas City to Springfield, an act that would assist students choosing to attend the new SWBC.

Mr. Maupin was very human! Yes, you are correct if you identify the first president as a wrestler. Reportedly, young men would occasionally line up to challenge the young president to demonstrate and test his physical strength. James Maupin’s daily schedule was rugged. With a sense of commitment, he rode his horse throughout Southwest Missouri in search of students and funds for SWBC. After a day of speaking and travel, his common practice was to stay in the saddle through the night and depend upon moonlight to guide him through the rugged Ozarks trails. He would often arrive back to campus in time to teach his Greek and science classes in the morning. His colleagues described him as quick in wit, loving, generous, and as courageous as a lion.

Early founders certainly included the first First Lady, Alice Jane Maupin. Her title at the new SWBC was the Director of the Female Department and Instructor of Music. But, we should know more, and we must admire her courage. A year after the Civil War ended, she attended Christian College, now Culver Stockton. Her entry to the school was not met with enthusiasm. Some citizens expressed doubt about Alice and other young women attending the college. Critics even questioned if women should be admitted to the college and asserted that ladies would not be able to complete the required work or that they would slow the progress of classes. Alice showed them. She proved herself equal to her male counterparts, and the next year, the college became coeducational with fifty-one women attending! Alice Staples-Maupin became a successful teacher, musician, and devoted mother.

Co-founder Abner Smith Ingman became the personality that administered the small college while Maupin directed the building. He was not only professor of Latin, but he was also an able speaker. His voice was strong, and his presence was commanding. His beard was always neatly trimmed.

In 1885, typhoid fever hit the small town of Bolivar. The school term at Southwest was in session for only a month when Abner Ingman took the fever. He did not see the college for 60 days. A devoted faculty member, J. M. Willard, died of the disease. While he was ill, Ingman learned of the death of his long-respected friend, James Maupin. Maupin was then living in Kansas City, but his body was brought to Bolivar for burial.

After a rugged time as an academy, Southwest Baptist lost its treasured educational building to fire in 1910. The campus was even rented for cattle grazing, and days were dark for the Bolivar school. Rev. C. W. Fisher launched efforts to rebuild Southwest with the proclamation: “We open session in 1913.” Often termed the savior of Southwest Baptist, the first issue of the Missourian was respectfully dedicated to him. While the nation held its breath with news of war in Europe and fears of influenza outbreaks continued, Fisher and his friends rebuilt. By 1920, the College Department had only a small number of students.

When you think of Pike Auditorium, do you think of John Calvin Pike? He led SWBC through almost a third of the twentieth century. Some members of our audience knew him as professor, dean or president. Pike studied with Maupin and Ingman. As a teacher, he never let even the smallest error go uncorrected. One of his favorite themes was “Waste is wicked.” Reportedly, when a blank piece of paper was found on the floor, some scholar would pounce on it and exclaim: “Waste is wicked!”

If we picture the survival of Southwest during depression years and following, we quickly supply the name of Courts Redford (pictured under this story). Known for his ability to gather dollars and make friends far and wide, his sermons accompanied by musical groups brought critical support for Southwest. The leadership dreams of Redford were passed on to devoted trustees, faculty and administrators with names including Dowdy, Craig, Selis, Spurgeon, Blunt, and our Dr. Taylor. The list of professors grew from the first group of seven to later add names such as Weaver, Beasley, Hamlett, Tucker, Stewart, Clark and hundreds more. Today’s faculty join the ranks of a great legacy.

With the strengths of those who have led us as our models, what qualities should we identify and imitate on Founders’ Day of 2007? Can we delineate affirmations that stand the tests of time?

First, we can affirm our founders’ commitment to optimism that they consistently blended with genuine faith. We must agree that President Maupin exhibited great courage in even advertising the new school and its location: The first catalog proudly read: “It (Bolivar) is accessible, though having no railroad, yet is connected with the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad at Springfield by daily stage, both ways.” By 1925, students were urged to travel by rail to Fair Play and told to take a short auto trip over to Bolivar and Southwest Baptist.

Next, we remember the sense of pride that was consistently blended with high expectations by our founders. Upon completion of the first building, Maupin declared: “A commodious and beautiful brick edifice is now complete in all its parts. It contains seven large recitation rooms and a chapel with seating capacity of six hundred. It is regarded among the very best in the Southwest.”

High expectations were declared for early students as well. The first regulations declared: “Students must attend all recitations,” and “disrespect from teachers will not be tolerated.”

In 2007, we can rightfully emulate the dedication exhibited by early graduates. Among the scores of educators, business leaders and denominational examples are the records of Emma Young. A graduate of 1883. Emma was appointed to serve in China by the Southern Baptist Convention Mission Board. After months at sea, she served as an administrator for a school, and as a scholar, she translated Bunyan.

Significantly, one of the first graduates of SWBC was R. K. Maiden, one the founders of The Word and Way. He was a faithful editor and served Missouri Baptists for many years.

Today, we can certainly derive new and heart-felt inspiration from the faith our founders expressed that was often expressed with deep commitment. Such a faith was repeatedly underscored by J. C. Pike with William Cullen Bryant’s poem as a basis: Pike noted that life is a certain flight from birth to death, and there is nothing uncertain about it. It is all in God’s plan.

Finally, we can resolve to love our university today as the founders so clearly loved it. President Maupin once voiced the deepest devotion to Southwest when he declared that he would rather the Ozark winds sing their sad requiem over his grave than for the Southwest Baptist College to fail.

In the nineteenth century, the gifted orator and statesman Daniel Webster was asked to defend the charter of Dartmouth College. The case went to the Supreme Court. In his closing remarks for the college, Webster engaged in his best logical-emotional appeal in describing his respect for the school: “It is, sir,” he said, “a small college. And yet there are those who love it.”

On this Founders’ Day, 2007, our love and devotion for Southwest Baptist University remain firm as we remember and treasure the dedication, faith, and commitment of our founders. Remembering them, we still imitate their faith.

Brad Mountjoy
baseball

There is no other sound quite like it in all of sports. It's a little like the ‘ping’ of a well hit golf ball by a titanium driver, but louder. And with more resonance. This sound is deeper. And maybe longer. It’s the sound of an aluminum bat crushing a fast ball. It’s the kind of sound that immediately makes you look up from your conversation to begin scanning the field, trying to find the ascent of the ball. And if this is happening to you at an SBU Bearcat game, chances are, the hitter is Brad Mountjoy.

Mountjoy’s hits just sound different. Nobody knows this better than opposing pitchers. Mountjoy knocked them around this season for a .378 average, 68 hits, 8 homers, and a whopping .606 slugging percentage. Near the end of the season, after hitting five home runs in six days, he was selected as the MIAA Hitter of the Week. Mountjoy was also selected as a first-team member of the All-MIAA baseball team.

“He plays with passion and puts his heart into it,” says Coach Sam Berg. “He has defensive skills that don't always show up in the box score. Brad closes well on shots to the outfield. And he’s a strong Christian with great character. He represents SBU very well. We’re looking to Brad to be one of our key leaders next year.”

Mountjoy believes, with all his heart, that God brought him to SBU to prepare him for something bigger than college baseball. “God brought me here to teach me that there is more to life than playing baseball. My dream is to play pro ball. I believe my time here at SBU is the first step toward that dream. The team didn’t do as well as I’d liked; but I’ve learned to play as well as I can, no matter what is going on around me.”

Obviously, Mountjoy is a focused athlete. As he steps into the on deck circle, he has a particular routine. He looks at the same place on the field. He takes the same practice swings. He ignores the crowd. He’s just focused.

“I go up to the plate with confidence, knowing that I can hit anyone I face. I step into the box, and see the pitcher – nobody else. I’m so locked in that I see every move the pitcher makes. It gets me ready to stay back on any pitch that he delivers. I’m patient to see my pitch; but I know he wants to get ahead in the count, so I’ll look for a good pitch early. But even if he gets ahead, I’ll sit and drive the ball where it’s pitched.”

Mountjoy has both elements required for greatness: (1) God-given talent and, (2) an incredibly strong work ethic. Coach Berg agrees.

“Lots of guys love to play. But Brad is a baseball player.”

Brad Nipper
golf

Brad Nipper wants you to know that he loves chicken sandwiches and waffle cut fries. That he enjoyed going to the Mall of America in Minnesota; and that on April 10 he won the Kansas City Intercollegiate Golf Tournament at the Swope Memorial Golf Course.

“Going into the last hole, I was two under for the day and I knew that I was leading by two strokes. I hit my tee shot left of the fairway into a group of trees. I didn’t have a shot at the green, so I just chipped the ball into the fairway, knowing I only needed to make bogey to win.”

The previous day, Nipper had carded a 67 to lead the field by three strokes. But today, Central’s Justin Yoder was challenging Nipper for the lead. Nipper knew the score, and just what he had to do.

“I was in the middle of the fairway about 100 yards out. All I needed to do was hit the green, then ‘two putt’ for the win. I aimed for the middle of the green, and that’s exactly where I hit it. I was 20 feet away from the hole. I lagged my putt a foot away, then tapped in for the win.”

Nipper’s win didn’t catch SBU golf coach, Kevin Cribbs, by surprise. “Brad has been consistent all year for us. Very solid. He came back from a disappointing match to win this one. We were thrilled to see him at the top.”

Nipper chose SBU, because he wanted to play golf for the Bearcats. So it was a particularly happy occasion for him, as he celebrated his victory.

“Winning my first college tournament felt great. What made it even better – my parents and grandparents were there to see it.”
SBU Athletic Director, Brent Good, said it best. "In the recruiting process, there are so many unknowns. You see the potential of a student-athlete, but it's up to them to realize their potential. But every so often, it happens. A student-athlete comes through your school, who is the epitome of what you're all about. They seem to excel in all areas: athletically, academically, relationally, and spiritually. He becomes the bar by which other student-athletes are measured."

T. Jay Sanderson is that student-athlete.

Most athletes would trade their career accomplishments for one year of Sanderson's. During this year alone, he was MIAA Athlete of the week seven times. He was All-American in the mile. Sanderson won the 800 meters at the Arkansas Invitational and the mile at the Tyson Invitational (Fayetteville), primarily against Division I competition.

Not only did he set school records in the 5000-meter run and the 3000-meter steeplechase, he is an NCAA Division II Championships qualifier in both. In cross country, he helped SBU to their highest ranking (#10 nationally) for NCAA Division II.

But when you hear Sanderson talk about his time at SBU, you quickly understand that his athletic accomplishments, although important, are just part of his worldview.

"During my time at SBU I have been truly blessed. I was really given a chance to attain my goals and desires, including my spiritual, educational, and athletic pursuits. The faculty and staff were always willing to go above and beyond the call of duty for their students and athletes."

"I've really been able to stretch myself at SBU and test the waters of what God had in store for me while in college. First off, He's blessed me with a godly wife that compliments me very well and has been the biggest answer to prayer. And academically He's really done the same. I was very fortunate to be able to pursue a degree in education and compete in cross country and track at the same time. Again, I feel so blessed to have received my degree in education and been able to excel in running as well. It's been a great experience to run at the Division II level and be successful in both track and cross country - advancing to compete at nationals six different seasons."

"I feel as though my time at SBU has really prepared me for future endeavors and I don't regret a single moment I've had here."

Head Coach Christy Capner is quick to point out that "McKenzie led our team in six or seven categories this season. That's just great for a freshman. And her RBIs would have been higher if we could have had more runners in scoring position during the season. I'm happy she was recognized. She carried us offensively this season, and we look for more great things from her next season."

The categories? Despite missing part of the season with her broken ankle, she led the Lady Bears in batting average (.318), runs (15), triples (2), home runs (5), total bases (51), slugging percentage (.600), and on base percentage (.341).

And she's only a freshman.

This year, Jolee Cook received an early acceptance into SBU’s doctoral program in physical therapy. It was the “academic” part of SBU that helped draw Cook to Bolivar and play tennis for the Lady Bearcats.

"I'm excited, it's a little bit more of my future that I'm a little more certain about. I was looking for a strong academic school. I've always thought a lot of Coach Bryant - I really wanted to play for him. My sister was already here. I actually never did an on-campus visit. I didn't have to. There were enough positive factors in place for me to know that SBU was the place for me."

Cook’s teammate and roommate, Johanna Olsson, says that Cook is a “team player” with great individual skills. "She hit the ball really well this year. I remember when she played Drury’s #1 (Alejandra Miranda-Sanchez). Jolee ended up losing a close battle (7-6, 6-3), but she played some great tennis against a great player that day."

Alex Kacamakis tennis

On May 9, Alex Kacamakis was recognized nationally as the 2007 Intercollegiate Tennis Association’s Rookie of the Year for Division II. “People started saying ‘Good job Alex’ and ‘Congratulations!’ I felt really proud,” says Kacamakis. And he should have felt proud. Winning the national Rookie of the Year is a great honor for the player from Budapest. As SBU Tennis Coach, John Bryant, described the evening, he offered some information about the award itself.

“Each region has its own Rookie of the Year. And we don’t know even the regional winners until the night of the national banquet. Since Alex was the co-MVP of the entire league, I had a good idea he would be our regional winner. In fact, I would have been disappointed if he hadn’t been selected as Rookie of the Year for the North Central region.”

“And he was picked. One by one, they asked all eight regional winners to stand. Then as they are all standing, they announce who is the national Rookie of the Year. And this year, it was SBU’s Alex Kacamakis.”

“At that moment,” Bryant continued, “I noticed that the Northwest Missouri State and Emporia State tables exploded with applause. They were delighted, as we all were, that someone from our region had received such a high national honor.”

Kacamakis favorite part of the season, however, isn’t the night he was awarded. When asked to pick one moment, as his favorite, he picked a team accomplishment instead of an individual accomplishment.

“My favorite moment is when we went to Joplin and defeated Washburn. They were undefeated before we played them. It was a great day for our team.”

Kacamakis is only the second freshman to play in the #1 position in the history of SBU.
Forty years ago, 100 students became the first four-year class to graduate from Southwest Baptist College (SWBC). Little did they know their accomplishments have left a legacy that lives on today.

Until 1967, SWBC served as a two-year junior college. When Dr. Joe Dillsaver, a professor at Northwestern State University in Oklahoma, came to SWBC in 1963, he had no intention of staying more than two years.

“[SWBC] laid a foundation for me morally which still impacts my life every day,” said Dr. Dillsaver. “I was simply at the right place at the right time. I needed a place like Southwest that would nurture me. I had not intended to stay since it was only a junior college at that time, but it fit. It gave me a solid foundation from which my whole life has come.”

According to Dr. Dillsaver, many of the first graduates went on to accomplish great things. Some serve as attorneys, teachers, basketball coaches, superintendents, missionaries, pastors, and one graduate worked in the secret service.

“In some ways, we were the foundation class,” said Dr. Dillsaver. “We started it. We stayed at Southwest and began the whole tradition of a four-year institution. A lot of us look back with a smile knowing that we were the first. The ones that came after us saw that we were successful; they continued on and passed it down.”

Dr. Dillsaver said the things he learned at SWBC have carried on with him throughout his life. He encourages students that there is only one way to live your life.

“[SWBC] was not the only thing different at SWBC in the ‘60s. Residence life was different also.

“During our junior year, four students and I became the first students to ever live off-campus,” said Dr. Dillsaver. “I think the only reason we were allowed was because there was a professor that lived next door.”

During his time at SWBC, Dr. Dillsaver was involved in the speech and debate team, a group that today has won many awards, including a national championship. (See pages 16-19 of this magazine for a feature on the SBU “Legacy of Excellence” in forensics.)

Dr. Dillsaver said the things he learned at SWBC have carried on with him throughout his life. He encourages students that there is only one way to live your life.

“I had been teaching at Oral Roberts for three years when I decided to leave,” said Dr. Dillsaver. “I took a job at Northwestern and shortly after was offered a job at a major university. When I did not get that job, I had no idea what God wanted me to do. Then I heard three words - ‘I will provide.’ The bottom line is when you’re struggling with anything, if you remember these three words, then it will be okay. In the past twenty years, this has made a world of difference in my life.”

Editor’s note: If you were a member of the first four-year class of 1967, please mark your calendars to attend your 40th reunion during Homecoming 2007: There’s No Place Like Home, October 5-6. For details, see www.sbuniv.edu/alumni.

SBU, A Family Tradition for the McGlaughlins

In these times of constant change, long-held family traditions seem increasingly rare. The ranks of Southwest Baptist University alumni include many wonderful families; however, the McGlaughlin family stands out from the rest. In their forty-six years of marriage, Doug and Janet McGlaughlin, along with the six McGlaughlin children and their respective spouses, have had a collective forty-three year presence on campus at SBU. Now grown, the McGlaughlin children and their spouses include: John ’86 and Sherry (Edwards) ’86, Deb (McGlaughlin) ’85 and Brad Mashburn ’83, James ’88 and Rhonda (Carlson) ’89, Deanna (McGlaughlin) ’93 and Travis Miller ’95, Jesse ’96 and Alicia (Hamilton), Dorothea (McGlaughlin) ’97 and Jason Lee ’95.

Doug and Janet began the family’s legacy in 1953 when Southwest Baptist University was still a two-year school known as Southwest Baptist College. When Janet came to campus as a sixteen year old freshman, tuition was a mere $400 per semester. Doug and Janet met as students, soon began enjoying the long walks to Dunnegan Park together and later married. Janet said, “I thought I didn’t want to marry a preacher, but I did!”

Five of the McGlaughlin’s six children met their spouses at SBU. Even Jesse’s wife, Alicia, who completed her education elsewhere, did not completely escape the SBU experience. As a high school student, Alicia completed a lifeguard course on campus. Many of the siblings agreed that having brothers and sisters on campus provided a unique experience. Deb recalled relying on her older brother during her first days on campus, “As a freshman coming to SBU, John was the only person I knew, and he had the car. We would go to church together, and we often met for meals. John’s friends became my friends. I met my husband [Brad] through John. Brad was John’s roommate that year.” John also recalled Deb and Brad’s courtship from his own perspective, “My roommate, Brad Mashburn, married my sister and then ‘kicked me out’ of his trailer. It was fun going to school with my brother and sister because their friends were my friends and vice versa.” Jesse and younger sister, Dorothea, shared a similar experience. “I was excited when she [Dorothea] decided to date and marry one of my best friends, Jason Lee,” Jesse said. Dorothea added that, “It was nice having an older brother at SBU at the same time I attended. [He was] someone to watch out for me and loan me twenty bucks! He often loaned me the car for late night outings with my friends. We also hung out together and shared friends. He actually introduced me to my husband, Jason!”

In addition to providing match-making services, the siblings supported one another in other ways. Jesse credited Deanna for keeping him “out of trouble” and added, “Plus, she took great notes when we took courses together.” Deanna said, “I was often running around campus turning in my younger brother, Jesse’s assignments or looking for my car that he had borrowed the night before. However, I wouldn’t trade how much closer we grew or the friends we made together, although I could do without being called “Jesse’s sister” now and then!”

“At school, we had mostly separate groups of friends, but it was great to have a free ride home when I needed it,” James said.

At a time when putting one child through college is daunting enough, the idea of having six children at a private university will strike fear in the hearts of even the most prepared parents. Doug and Janet worked hard during their time as students, and their children followed in their footsteps. Janet remembered working in the dining hall as assistant waitress chief during her years at SWBC. “I worked summers, did work study, had a scholarship and borrowed with my dad’s help. I owed about $350 after two years, and thought I was deeply in debt.”

by Cheryl (Bowles) Summers ’96
Doug also spent many hours in the dining hall in the days before automated dishwashing systems. He said, “I stacked dishes in cupboards after other had washed and dried them. I got $45 a semester for doing that three times each day.” Janet suggested that this hard work approach to paying for higher education is one that continues to apply, “I think a lot of kids should consider working as they go through instead of accruing such a high indebtedness. The discipline of using your time wisely is a life skill that should be learned early.”

Doug added that students should “put a quality education over cost.” Janet agreed saying that students must “consider the importance of Christian friends, mission opportunities, revival teams, more personal help and encouragement from faculty, social activities and sports with less pressure to follow the wrong crowd.” She said, “I felt much less apprehensive about letting the kids take off for college when they had siblings or other friends already there.” Following their parents’ example, the McGlaughlin children held many jobs on and off campus. Jesse said, “I WORKED everywhere and anywhere I could.” Deb remembered her father saying, “You can go to school anywhere you want, but your money is going to SBU.”

The McGlaughlin family has embodied the SBU mission statement: “Southwest Baptist University is a Christ-centered, caring academic community preparing students to be servant-leaders in a global society.” Creating their own unique legacy of excellence, this family has multiplied the investment made by SBU faculty, staff and students.

After years of serving on the mission field with the Baptist General Conference in Senegal and The Gambia, Brad and Deb (McGlaughlin) Mashburn are enjoying a time of furlough before returning to Senegal this August or September. Younger sister, Dorothea and her husband Jason Lee are also preparing to leave for Senegal sometime this summer to work with the International Mission Board. Dorothea shared, “The most important thing I did at SBU was to become involved in short-term mission trips. God began to open up my eyes to expand my world view. I began my search to join God in His work during my time at SBU through mission trips, music tours and godly, Christian professors like Susan Baker and Dr. Gordon Dutile.”

James echoed these sentiments saying that a mission trip to Gainesville, Florida “opened my eyes to thinking about how I could participate in missions.” Jesse said, “The character of the people and faculty I met at SBU as well as supportive opportunities such as Revival Teams and ‘Ministers in Education’ Sundays gave me experiences that were invaluable as I have served as youth pastor and attempt to live out the great commission in my life today. While some have been called to full-time Christian service, others have become Christian examples in other areas serving as teachers, professors, president of the local PTA, godly mothers, and even as a computer systems analyst.

Doug said that his children have “blessed us many times over by their commitment to Christ.” He went on to say, “We tried to raise them from their beginnings to live responsibly at all times. We believed we need to love our children, and then raise them so that others will love them. They not only needed to know not to abuse person or property, but to protect others’ person and property, and above all, to honor God by being obedient to Him in their lives.” With a third generation of McGlaughlins on the horizon and some beginning their own college experience soon, it seems that this mission has been accomplished even as the legacy continues.
SBU Grads in the District:
Work, Work, Work in the Nation’s Capital

Approximately ninety Southwest Baptist University alumni live and work in the greater Washington D.C. metropolitan area. The emphasis in the nation's capital area is always on work. Though the area affords tremendous cultural resources and many of the country’s national treasures (not the least of which is the nation’s other statue of Simon Bolivar), people come to the District to work. Politicians, national news and some of the nation’s worst traffic problems may grab the headlines from this bustling city, but the pulse of the city is powered by employees of government agencies, government contractors, the military and high tech industries.

One local SBU graduate is Marsha Powell who graduated in 1984 with a Bachelor of Music in music education degree. Originally, Powell came to the national capital area (by way of Dallas) to teach. She now works at the Federal Aviation Administration as a program analyst administering maintenance contracts for air traffic control equipment. Powell is also employed part time as music librarian and director of a women’s ensemble. In addition, she serves on the women’s ministries board of her church. Prior to her SBU experience, she had worked in the telecommunications field and now is employed in Networking/Telecommunications with the National Security Agency. Powell loves recalling some of the fun experiences from SBU: camping out in Dunnegan Park in pouring down rain, t-ping a house, back packing with the Church Rec majors, and Muirhead Hall. “Life at SBU was great!”

This author was a 1975 speech major, and came to the greater Washington area in 1998 to become associate pastor of a multi-ethnic church in Alexandria, Va. I moved from Crystal City, Mo., which is 98% white to a school district where 65% of my son’s classmates didn’t speak English at home. Sometimes I pinch myself to think, after growing up in small towns in Missouri, that I live on the edge of our nation’s capital. As I look back on my experience at SBU, theater productions helped me develop confidence. My experiences at Southwest also broadened my view of the world. One of my special memories since living here was officiating the wedding for Shun Zhang, SBU class of 1999. We have had several SBU alumni gatherings since living here and they have always been great fun.

Many SBU grads have come and gone from the national capital area. Career military professionals almost always have a tour that takes them to the Pentagon or to one of the numerous military bases or agencies. Students and young adults come and go working as interns on Capital Hill. When you think of Washington D.C., remember the White House, Capital Hill, the monuments, the museums, and the numerous SBU grads who live and work in this great city.
Dear Alumni and Friends,

I’ve been asked to share a few life impressions with SBU. I am in the midst of my sixth month at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington, D.C., where I live in a furnished studio sublet in Adam’s Morgan and work during the week. I commute to my husband Brandon on Manhattan’s Upper West Side for the weekends. He is earning his master’s degree in cinema studies from New York University and spends the rest of his time as a film critic.

My short time at NASA has been far from dull. In my first week, one of the main instruments on the Hubble Space Telescope broke. In my second week, I got to meet John Glenn. In my third week, we released the budget for 2008, and prepared for it to be the story. Instead, we responded to queries about astronaut Lisa Nowak, accused of attempted first-degree murder. In April, we experienced a tragic murder-suicide at the Johnson Space Center. In June, we got back to the business of launching space shuttles with the successful STS-117 mission.

Moving from a small nonprofit of 40 employees where I WAS the communications department to a large government bureaucracy where our department is more than 40 is quite a transition. But to the best I can tell, I have joined an outstanding team.

Many of our public affairs officers are embedded directly in departments such as Space Operations and Science, but I work in the newsroom. My cube neighbor David and I edit and issue all the press releases (an average of five each day). We answer and direct media calls. We anticipate three more space shuttle launches this year (August, October and December) and several science launches, which should keep us plenty busy. We also will be working on a year-long communications plan for NASA’s 50th anniversary in October 2008. Recently, I served as press secretary to Deputy Administrator Shana Dale on a trip to Colorado and Arizona.

When I have not been busy in the newsroom, I have been navigating my way through the bureaucracy. Thankfully, I have help: David has worked here 15 years and is a scholar of the bureaucracy. He’s also very funny, which helps immensely when faced with stacks of forms. Perspective also helps. Spaceflight is the most technologically advanced thing we do as a nation – and as humans – and it is both sobering and thrilling to know I work here.

So how did I get here?

I grew up in Colorado Springs, Colo.; I’m actually a rare native of the state. I decided to attend SBU largely because it fit my needs and desires: a smaller university where I could know my professors, the opportunity to study abroad (a life-changing experience) and to play NCAA women’s soccer, and enough scholarships that I could earn a degree without incurring massive debt.

I found SBU through a college fair. I joined about 20 other prospective students from the West for an SBU-hosted weekend bus trip. We stayed in the dorms, ate in the cafeteria, toured the campus, and even took a field trip to Springfield to visit Bass Pro and go “barn swinging.”

I earned two degrees at SBU: English and Business Administration, with a concentration in Public Affairs. Having both has given me an edge in public affairs. The most valuable way in which SBU prepared me was the interaction and mentor relationships I formed with several professors. I still stay in touch with several. And those professors were supportive when I missed class for the internship that led to my first post-college job.

After SBU, I returned to Colorado to work for the Space Foundation, where I had interned. Ultimately, I became its director of communications, for which my SBU education, particularly classes with Dr. Brett Miller, prepared me well. In that position, I worked closely with NASA and many Fortune 500 companies in the aerospace industry. When NASA asked me to apply for a job at its Washington headquarters, I jumped at the opportunity. I have been very lucky to see three space shuttle launches, and I am well on my way to becoming a bona fide space geek.

I really appreciate living in cities with as many cultural opportunities as New York and Washington, from the museums to the Broadway shows to the monuments and Central Park. Washington routinely is voted one of the best cities for young professionals. It is full of young, intelligent, career-oriented individuals who provide an environment in which you can thrive and make great friends. And sometimes, when you have a friend at the British Embassy, you get to see Queen Elizabeth II when she comes to town.

I hope all my SBU friends are doing well and having as much fun as I am. If you are coming to either city or would just like to reconnect, please e-mail me at slfibbs@yahoo.com.

Cheers,
Stephanie
At the United States Military Academy at West Point, first-year students soon learn they are being trained for the legacy of excellence known as the “long gray line” of West Point graduates. At SBU, speech and debate students on the Pi Kappa Delta forensics team soon learn that they, too, are part of a legacy of excellence, but at SBU, they are part of the “long green line” that has produced ten national championship teams and scores of individual accomplishments.

Pi Kappa Delta
A LEGACY OF EXCELLENCE

Being Green

Dr. Bob R. Derryberry, senior professor of communication arts and director of the SBU speech and debate team, explains “being green” at SBU: “Being green is a means of coaching that keeps us organized with 10-50 team events. We have a poster board with all the names of the competitors listed under their events. If you achieve in practice session a highlighting of your name in green, you are ready in our eyes to compete. If you are not highlighted in green, you’re not ready whether a freshman or a senior.”

Dr. Josh Compton ’97, assistant professor and department chair of communication arts, added, “A green marker is taken to every tournament.

“Sometimes we are still listening to events in the hotel room and the students are sheepish, because this is an academic embarrassment.” Dr. Derryberry said. “Ideally everyone is green by the time they get on the bus.

“There are actually different levels of being green: September green is different than Christmas green. Some are almost green, some pale green. They like marking themselves when we tell them they are green. Our co[extra]-curricular forensics program is not divorced from academic control. The students go to classes and demonstrate their speeches for me and to other classes and stand for criticism.”

“Forensics students definitely learn about the art of taking criticism,” said Dr. Compton, himself a product of the forensics team discipline at SBU.

In an era where “forensics” is more often associated with crime-solving shows and not with the communication arts, Dr. Derryberry explained the PKD organization and the art of forensics: “Forensics means to ‘determine the truth’ by investigation. We want the best idea to prevail in academics. In this sense, forensics is ‘the art of persuasion beautiful and just.’ Pi Kappa Delta (PKD) is a national organization and is the largest forensics honorary. PKD has over 200 chapters in the United States and it also the oldest forensics organization. PKD’s goal is to promote forensics. We have been members for over 40 years. The SWBC speech and debate program began in 1963-64. We entered our first PKD competition in 1968. The PKD organization was hard to get into in those days. By the way, the new president of PKD, Tom Huebner ’87, is a graduate of our forensics program.”

When asked how one teaches the “text-message” generation to think deeply and analytically in pursuit of truth, Dr. Compton said, “Our focus is idea over style no matter the electronic device. We do see students wanting to memorize the rough draft rather than developing the idea.”

Dr Derryberry said, “Technology can be a short cut to writing and speaking well.”

“We are teaching occasion and audience, too” said Dr. Compton. “The forensics tournaments require weeks of preparation and then endurance to face one to three, sometimes even five days of competitive events, poetry reading, rhetoric, memorized forms, debate -- if you’re... willing to put in the hours they can be competitive. PKD team members must attend meetings as a group as well as individual sessions. They put in an average of 5-10 hours a week practicing, preparing, and meeting as a team and researching. The typical student takes three to four events and they have three to four rounds; most have an hour of memorized material.”

Dr. Derryberry said he and Dr. Compton “are always at every event. PKD tournaments take a lot of energy and patience from students and coaches. We try to go to at least eight tournaments per year. The bad weather hit us hard this year.”

Memorable Tournament Experiences
Dr. Compton recalled that while he was a student at SBU there was a 17-year old student who was married with an infant son. “He was a music major from Colorado and took the main intro class, a first-year public speaking class. He thought he would like to try forensics. He and his wife would hand off their baby son in the parking lot before tournaments and he ended up being one of our best competitors. The grandmother moved here to take care of their baby when they both went to school here. He went to law school and now works for the Justice Department in D.C. He was my best friend on my team. I was his best man in his wedding.”

“As a competitor, my first tournament is my most vivid memory. To be asked to try to be on the team as a freshman from a rural community… that someone recognized I had a tiny bit of talent and the aptitude and ability. I took one event. It wasn’t even a very good speech as I recall… I brought home a sixth place trophy. It is a PKD tradition for seniors to give back one award to SBU. This trophy from my first tournament was the one I gave back.”

Dr. Compton is soon to start his tenth year teaching at SBU; he came back in 1998. In contrast, Dr. Derryberry has spent 43 years here at SBU. “It was such a nice, quiet junior college in those days,” Dr. Derryberry said with a wistful smile as he recalled his favorite tournament memories: “The times we have been fortunate to win the top sweepstakes trophies— they call the [school’s names] in ascending order to the championships. I tell the students always to be kind and gracious; even if we did our best and win 17th place. Be kind and gracious and humbled.”

Another memorable moment came for Dr. Compton in 2001: “It was the highest honor when Dr. D. was inducted into the PKD Hall of Fame. It was a wonderful ceremony, and all our kids went to see Dr. D. get his award. It was the top honor. That was exciting!”

Dr. Derryberry recalled less glamorous moments from past years, “Our trip to Fargo, North Dakota, was so cold that the condensation froze on the inside of our university vehicle. It was 13 hours and a grueling trip. We had no budget [in past years]. We’d ask students, ‘would you like to be in a little debate?’ We were housed in people’s homes (good Baptists and Methodists) and later in cheap hotels. Mom Ferris prepared our sack lunches in church yards and in station wagons. We spent more on plane tickets to Michigan this year, than my salary in past years.”

Dr. Compton said, “We have stopped in roadside parks on the way to recent tournaments to remember this part of our history. No one ever really leaves this program. My generation of alums emails and calls after a tournament to ask how we did.”

Another forensics team tradition is the annual banquet held each year for students, alumni, and guests on the first Saturday in May. “It is a celebration of activity and teamwork and our growth,” said Dr. Compton. The speaker this year was speech and debate alumnus, Dr. Randy Arnett ’78, who serves with his wife as a missionary in West Africa with the International Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The Art of Persuasion
Beautiful and Just
In the communications arts, appearance is as important as what is said, so the forensics team is encouraged to dress professionally for...
The beginnings of the forensics program at Southwest Baptist University started with the school year in 1963-1964 with a small group of students and a coach. In 1968, the group officially sent a petition to the National Pi Kappa Delta office, to be considered for official membership in the national honorary group. Since that time the award-winning group, lead by Dr. Bob Derryberry, has brought a long legacy of excellence to Southwest Baptist University. The following are interviews with team members; Jessica Kershner, Shannon Klousia, Nathan Ross, Vandi Eslit, and David Van Bebber, from the 2006-2007 squad, which recently brought home another Pi Kappa Delta national championship win.

Did you come to SBU knowing that you would participate in forensics?
Kershner: Yes, I came to SBU knowing that I would participate in the forensics program. I came from Nixa High School where I competed in Speech and Debate.
Klousia: When I came to SBU I had no intentions of participating in forensics — I didn’t even know what forensics was.
Ross: I did know that I was going to participate in forensics when I came to SBU. I actually completed a scholarship audition. Participating in forensics at SBU seemed natural to me because I competed in speech and debate at Riley County High School in Riley, Kansas.
Eslit: I did know that I was going to compete in the forensics program at SBU; it was actually a lot of the reason I chose to come to SBU.
Van Bebber: I also knew that I was going to participate in the forensics program at SBU. Nathan Ross and I auditioned for a forensics scholarship on the same day. Nathan and I also competed together as a team in high school.

What has being part of Pi Kappa Delta taught you?
Kershner: Motivation and tradition come together to form success.
Klousia: I have learned so much; how to speak well, articulate, share ideas clearly, debate, teamwork, and how to find good literature.
Ross: The harder you try the luckier you get.
Eslit: PKD has taught me discipline and to be grateful no matter the outcome.
Van Bebber: Being a part of PKD is a reminder to me that I have the ability to speak well when I have worked hard to prepare.

How does it feel to be part of such a long legacy of excellence?
Kershner: Pressurized. It is a constant cause of stress, but it is always followed with a justified amount of pride in the team. >><> Klousia: It is an honor and I am thankful to be a part of this long legacy.
Ross: It feels like being in between a rock and a world of hard possibilities that I can do well in.
Eslit: It is quite humbling. It is also a great honor.
Van Bebber: I am always reminded to strive for the best as a competitor who represents such a fine program.

Tell me about your first contest experience or any other memorable contest?
Kershner: My most memorable experience was at my third tournament at Cameron University. Amy Bopp, a fellow teammate, and I thought we might die because we were competing in round after round.
Klousia: I only had one speech on my first tournament. My speech was a persuasive speech and I was really nervous about it. I ended up breaking into finals and I did not even know what breaking was. I ended up getting sixth place with that speech.

Ross: My first contest in college was in Ohio. I did not know anyone and to be completely honest, I had more enjoyment during the trip than it looked like I was having.

Eslit: My first contest experience was unforgettable. On the way to Truman’s campus, I thought to myself, “Why did I get myself into this.” I was so nervous! But when the day was over, I had convinced myself that I really can do this.

Van Bebber: My first contest experience for SBU was quite intimidating and let me know just how hard I would have to work to be successful.

What does being green mean to you?

Kershner: Being green to me means I broke my streak of procrastination.

Klousia: Being green to me means that the coaches have blessed my event and they think I am ready for competition and they are behind my event as well.

Ross: Being green to me means to work; both hard work and smart work.

Eslit: Being green is confirmation to me that I am on my way, but not quite all the way there; but that to be competitive, we need drive and passion.

Van Bebber: Being green means to me that the coaches believe my selection has the ability to do well at the tournament and that it will represent our school well.

What are your plans for life after SBU?

Kershner: I have a job lined up (internationally) with Girl Scouts of the USA. Then I hope to attend law school.

Klousia: I have no idea! I am scared. I am not exactly sure what I will do, maybe teaching or graduate school.

Ross: I plan to start teaching or go to graduate school.

Eslit: Wow, it is up in the air. I would love to teach drama and speech and maybe even coach speech and debate.

Van Bebber: I want to pursue a master's degree in education and then become a missionary.

What would your advice be for a novice?

Kershner: Practice early, hard, and ask for help.

Klousia: Do not get discouraged. Just do your best, work your hardest and be satisfied. Know that you will grow as you are on the team. You will grow in many ways.

Ross: If you think you cannot do this you are wrong. If you think you can, then why don’t you have two events ready?

Eslit: Don’t ever tell yourself you are not good enough or won’t be able to make your goal. You must keep pressing on and never limit yourself. Give it your all.

Van Bebber: Don’t sell yourself short and put as much as you can into the program.

What is your favorite thing or memory about PKD?

Kershner: The friends and fellowship.

Klousia: My favorite memory is winning nationals this year: not just because we won. The moment they announced SBU as victorious, that moment was forever seared into my mind. We all looked at each other in pure awe, saying to each other silently “We did it!” we had always been a team, but at that moment, we were really were a team. Everyone had worked so hard and contributed every little thing at nationals. We had a tough year in teams of competition, so to hear that we had been successful at nationals was pure joy for the team.

Ross: Either the coaches, the coffee, or the humble pride of having an hours worth of work and information that can be recalled upon command

Eslit: My favorite memory would be sitting with our team (at least most) and hearing “Southwest Baptist University” for the champions and looking around at my teammates’ and coaches’ faces. It was priceless.

Van Bebber: Winning nationals this year is one of the greatest experiences of my life.
St. John’s College of Nursing and Health Sciences of SBU
St. John’s College of Nursing and Health Sciences of Southwest Baptist University pinned sixty-eight nursing graduates during the college’s May pinning ceremony. Commencement was held on the SBU Bolivar campus, May 19. Forty-three of the May graduates were recipients of the J.F. Johnson Educational Assistance program and are currently employed by St. John’s Hospital-Springfield.

Associate of science in nursing graduate Rachel McEntire received a special blessing of hands from her classmates at the May 2007 pinning ceremony. Sister Richard Mary Burke, RSM, (pictured above left with McEntire and Bethany Douglas) led special prayer for McEntire who is being deployed to Iraq with the 325th Combat Support Hospital. More than 800 family, friends, faculty and staff, also participated in the special prayer for McEntire’s safety.

May 2007 Graduates from the SBU-Salem Campus
The following fifteen students graduated from the SBU-Salem Campus in May 2007.

Katie McPherson – B.S. Business Administration
Shanna Stephanie Owens – B.S. Business Administration
Linda Diane Ruben – B.S. Business Administration
Lena H. Copenace – B.S. Psychology
Jodie Jannette Emory – B.S. Psychology

May 2007 Graduates from the SBU-Mountain View Campus

These graduates received their bachelor’s degrees:
Angie Boyd - B.S. in Psychology
Alyssa Smith - B.S. in Human Services
Lori Holden - B.S. in Education
All others received a B.S. in Elementary Education
Special honors were given to the following Mt. View graduates: Alyssa Smith (Summa Cum Laude, Who’s Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, Alpha Chi); Stacy Barnes (Cum Laude); Ashley Beavers (Cum Laude); Melina Vernon (Cum Laude).
Phillip and Gail Rector’s family has filled several pages of SBU’s history. From a great-great-great uncle to a future daughter-in-law, there have been many faces of the Rector family to pass through SBU.

Phillip Rector ’76 felt a calling to enter the ministry while he was searching for colleges to attend. Pastor O.V. Dodson, from First Baptist Church in Nevada, Mo., invited Phillip to visit Southwest Baptist College (SWBC) while he attended a trustees meeting on campus. Phillip was immediately drawn to the school and was especially attracted to the college’s program that admitted high school seniors to enroll in classes during the summer. Phillip signed up and attended classes during the summers of 1972 and 1973. By the time he entered SWBC as a full-time student in the fall of 1973, he was almost a sophomore. He received a bachelor of science degree in psychology and sociology.

Gail Brockmeier ’74 heeded her high school counselor’s advice when choosing a college to attend. Her counselor strongly recommended that she attend SWBC, because he knew the college had a great reputation for providing a superior education while emphasizing Christian values. Gail entered into SWBC in the fall of 1971 obtaining a bachelor of arts degree in psychology and sociology.

Phillip and Gail’s paths soon crossed when they met at SWBC during the summer of 1973. During the following spring, Gail took Phillip out for TWIRP (The Woman is Required to Pay) week, and they began to date soon after. The couple married in 1976 after Phillip graduated. They have been married for 31 years and have three children: Lacey Renee, Jonathan and Stephanie. Lacey Renee and Jonathan both graduated from SBU.

Over the 31 years after leaving SWBC, Phillip has pastored five churches: First Baptist Church, Leeton, Mo., Chehalem Valley Baptist Church, Newberg, Ore., First Baptist Church, Winfield, Mo., St. Clair Southern Baptist Church, St. Clair, Mo. and First Baptist Church, Belle, Mo. He currently serves as director of missions for the Dixon Baptist Association. After Gail graduated from SWBC, she went on to get a master’s degree in counseling psychology at Central Missouri State University. She states that SWBC helped prepare her for her role as a minister’s wife. Both Phillip and Gail left SWBC with a degree, a spouse, various friends, and countless wonderful memories. However, Southwest Baptist University is still a very big part of their lives as they have seen two of their children attend the University.

Lacey Renee (left) was born wanting to go to SBU. When asked what she wanted to do when she grew up as a young girl in preschool, Lacey Renee would confidently says, “I want to go to SBU!” She met her goal in 1998 when she began her first semester at the University. She majored in vocal/instrumental music education and graduated in May 2003. After leaving SBU, Lacey began teaching kindergarten through 12th grade music at a small school north of Sikeston, Mo. She is currently finishing her master’s degree in vocal pedagogy at Missouri State University. Lacey Renee eventually wants to pursue a doctorate in interdisciplinary arts and work at a community arts school sponsored by a church.

Jonathan was impressed by SBU while visiting his sister, Lacey Renee, and watching the Symphonic Winds and Chorale perform. He desired to study music, and after visiting his sister at SBU, he realized that the University had a strong music program. In 2001, Jon enrolled at SBU and majored in general music with a concentration in music business. He graduated in 2005 and began working on a master of business administration degree at the University, which he will complete this summer. Like his dad, Jon met his future wife at SBU, Michal Richert. Michal, with a bachelor of science degree in music, graduated in May 2007. Jon and Michal will be married in August 2007 and will move to Wichita, Kan. where Michal will be attending graduate school.

Even more interesting, the Rector history with SBU did not begin with Phillip or Gail. Phillip’s great-great-great uncle, John W. Haines, was a Baptist minister, teacher and writer. He pastored Campbell’s Grove Baptist Church in Polk County, Mo. Haines served on the board of trustees of SWBC from 1883 to 1912. He served as President of the board of trustees in 1897. In 1905, SWBC granted Haines the honorary Doctor of Divinity degree. He also wrote the book, “History of Polk County Baptist Association.” His daughter, Martha, entered SWBC in 1879 teaching part-time and attending school. She graduated in 1887 with a B.L. degree.

SBU has been and still is a major part of the Rector’s lives. Phillip, Gail, Lacey Renee and Jonathan each walked onto SBU’s campus for the first time as students with great expectations of going ‘somewhere’ and becoming ‘someone.’ But God’s plans exceeded theirs. God has certainly blessed the family through the education and experiences they gained at the University. No matter where His path takes them now, they will forever hold the values, principles, and teaching they gained from SBU.
Retiring to Create

Art Becomes Business for Retired Alumni Couple

by Sharina Smith

Ellis Bray ’59 and Annetta “Jackie” (Jackson) Bray ’60 were not music or art majors while attending Southwest Baptist College, but music got them together and art has allowed them to open a business together in their “retirement” years.

Ellis reminisces about his years at SWBC: “While at SWBC, I was a good student, with a math major and English minor, always on the dean’s list, and active in school affairs. I was the first full-term president of the Math Club, and also the assistant editor of the school’s publication, which became the Omnibus, and in fact, I am the person who named it! I was also involved in intramural sports, and last, but best, I participated in weekend revival teams, usually as song-leader. I say ‘best’ because on one of these teams, the pianist was a girl named Annetta Jackson (later to be better known as ‘Jackie’), who quickly became a good friend, then later, my wife. So, my greatest achievement at Southwest was finding a wonderful life-mate. We’ve now been married 46+ years, and thus are off to a good start! Ah, the rewards of willing service!”

Jackie started her career at SWBC as a bookkeeping major but then switched to a degree in elementary education with mathematics as a major and English as a minor. Jackie said she was actually the one who asked Ellis out first: “The week after the revival where we met, it was TWIRP (The Woman is Requested to Pay) week, when the girls could ask a boy for a date. Ellis hung around until I asked him out!” Ellis said, “We spent every hour we could together.” In those days, dating destinations were limited. “We could only go to the park, go to the ballgames at SWBC, go to the highway Café or the library,” said Jackie. “I can’t remember where we went on our first ‘official’ date, but it was probably the library.”

Ellis lived in The Blue Home, which he said other SWBC grads from his era would remember. With a twinkle in her eye, Jackie said, “Blue Home guys were feared. Howard Boyd was a Blue Home guy.” Ellis described one of their trend-setting rebellions: “It was de rigueur on Sundays that we Blue Home guys went to church and then to a meal. We rebelled from the tradition of wearing church clothes. We rebelled by wearing our shirts and ties with blue jeans. Later the basketball team did, too. They usually copied us! On Sunday nights, I still remember the “sad sacks” – our Sunday evening meal – we got them and walked to the park just to get away.”

After receiving their A.A. degrees from SWBC, Ellis and Jackie went to Jefferson City, Missouri. They were married in 1960 and Ellis worked while attending Lincoln University, where he earned a bachelor of science in education. Although only one-fourth of the student body was white, Ellis said he “mostly didn’t notice the difference between the races.”

The day after graduating from Lincoln, he and Jackie had their first child, Jay, in 1961. Ellis then taught at the University of Missouri as a teaching assistant while earning his master’s degree in mathematics.

The Brays then moved to Anderson, Indiana, where Ellis had a job offer with General Motors. Ellis worked for 34 years for the Guide Division of General Motors, primarily as an engineering manager. “While I was at Guide, I was the resident wordsmith,” Ellis said. “Whatever department I was in, I was writing for it.”

Three years after the birth of their son, the Brays welcomed a baby girl, Melody, into their family. Jackie spent her career as an “involved mom” and Vacation Bible School teacher and director. While her children were in school, Jackie participated in Parents and Teachers Organization, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and according to Ellis, she was the Vacation Bible School director in every church they’ve attended. While still at SWBC, Jackie had attended training in Jefferson City and then traveled to country churches in rural areas to set up Vacation Bible Schools.

In 1997, the Brays “moved back to Central Missouri to help care for elderly parents.” Ellis said during his time in Indiana, he “became convinced of a compelling call to write and teach Scripture.” After their kids graduated, Jackie said she had started painting. Her medium is tollpainting, now known as decorative painting. Tollpainting originally was on tin, but now it can be done on wood and fabric as well as tin. A true leader, Jackie has served as an art council president and on the board for the National Oil and Acrylic Painters Society. Ellis showed obvious pride in his wife’s leadership abilities when he announced that Jackie was president of the Indy Toller Society.

Ellis said he and Jackie have now “retired to” a life of creativity. They opened a business together in Eldon, Missouri, called Country Roots Creations, in which they feature their handmade jewelry, Jackie’s paintings, and the books Ellis has written and published since retiring from General Motors. Ellis said he first tried traditional publishing but finally decided on self-publishing his books. His books include I Will Praise Him: A Devotional on the Psalms, Growing Up in the Bend, and Treasure in Jars of Clay.

Ellis summed up the Christian life by sharing one of the points he makes in an advanced “cabinoching” class he teaches: “The point of polishing and cutting the stones to make round, domed surfaces is to reflect light. It is our job to recognize our gifts and build our skills to glorify God and serve other people.” Ellis and Jackie have lived a life of service to their family and to career, and now they are sharing their creative gifts with the world.
The writing Ellis is most proud to share is the letter he wrote to the Osage Beach Vacation News to nominate Jackie for “Women of the Year 2005.” Ellis said he found it “little short of miraculous” to keep within the required 125 words, but he crafted this 124-word tribute to his wife:

Jackie Bray has served superbly as Lake Arts Council and Eldon Arts Council president, as church VBS Director and NOAPS board member. She works tirelessly as full-time volunteer for numerous arts and creativity initiatives.

But Jackie’s greater worth is that others become better for her influence. She is the consummate team player, a great role model whose integrity, talents, hard work, positive attitude and calm wisdom cause those around her to excel. Unfailingly, cheerfully, she displays a sweet gentle spirit and a caring heart.

For her busy hands, smiling face, and warm heart, Jackie truly is “best friend” to many people. The list steadily grows, as all who know her instinctively trust and confide in her, treasure her counsel, and cherish her genuineness.

Jackie Bray was named “Woman of the Year 2005.”

Encouraging Others to Excel

Books by E.M. Bray...

I Will Praise Him: A Devotional Commentary on the Psalms
E.M. Bray ’59, Country Roots Publications © 1995

God wants His people to praise Him. He considers our heartfelt praise of Him to be of great importance. We know this to be true, for the Book of Psalms, the longest book in the Bible, has as its foremost theme the praise of God by His people. The Psalms teach us to praise, and graciously, they give us many reasons to do so. How wise it is, then, for us to devote time to a systematic study of their words. May they reveal to us His love, His faithfulness, His goodness to us. May the convince us of His mercy and grace, and of His right to be our Sovereign.

Treasure in Jars of Clay
E.M. Bray, Country Roots Publications © 2002

What a treasure is the salvation we have in Christ! It is our pearl of great price. And to add one mystery to another, we hold this treasure in ordinary containers, in our everyday lives here on earth. The Bible calls us jars of clay, earthen vessels. Why would God do such a thing: why does He have us keep such a great possession in common pots? Isn’t it so that believers will come to agree with God that He is to receive all the glory for our salvation? “But we have this treasure in jars of clay to show that this all-surpassing power is from God and not from us.” (II Corinthians 4:7) Inside, the author shares what he learned from God’s Word about the terms relating to the salvation of sinners, to help fellow believers see that it is centered in God. Examine your treasure, delight in what He has done for you. Then, in gratitude, praise His name.

Growing Up In The Bend

This is a book of reminiscence. In it, the author recounts many events from his childhood, which was spent entirely in the Bend community, and philosophizes on how they helped to shape his life. Parents, older brothers and sisters, teachers, other adults, and fellow students of the Bend school, both older and younger, all played a part in making this childhood delightful for the author. You are invited to go back with him to the late 40s and early 50s, to a setting along the Gasconade River in Central Missouri, one that still is serene and beautiful, and enjoy a way of life that, while now forever past, can at least be fondly remembered. Country roots go deep.
Ree’s Mountain
Roger Long ‘69,
Tate Publishing, LLC: 2005
Ree’s Mountain is about to go dark. The patch-worked power system can no longer be repaired, and if a miracle can’t be found soon, the Dimini will have to leave the ancient security of the mountain and find another, far less safe place to call home. Ree’s chance meeting with a dreaded Treswowak seems to offer the only hope for the Mountain Dimini. Soaring through the skies atop Keeah, her great bald eagle, Ree gains the help of the Forest Dimini and the Treswowak named Jason. This alliance must overcome generations of fear and mistrust if her people are to be saved. And Ree? She longs for freedom from her loneliness and a love to warm her heart. Ree’s Mountain is delightful, spell-binding, memorable, and likened to writings by C.S. Lewis and others who blended the gospel with fantasy for profound effect. Readers of every age will treasure Ree’s Mountain, destined to be a Christian classic.

The Reflection of God
Tonya (Colvin) Heavin ‘92
Tate Publishing & Enterprises, 2006
Are you listening to me? What were you thinking? What have I told you? Have you ever found yourself asking these questions of your children? Have you ever felt God is asking the same questions of you? In The Reflection of God, author Tonya Heavin examines how the relationship with your children often mirrors your relationship with God. This reflection dares you to step in and look deeply into your own soul as you search for answers to God’s questions...the same questions and experiences your children undergo often on a daily basis. The Reflection of God offers the reader an opportunity to strengthen their own relationship with God by observing the situations that many parents have found themselves experiencing when dealing with children. Readers of all ages will identify with the need to find The Reflection of God in their own lives.

Opportunity: Introducing Free Enterprise & Business
Dr. David Whitlock,
Wipf and Stock Publishers © 2007
Christian Durant, a student at Leland University, worked his way through college at a local retailer, Stearns and Company. Though he studied history at Leland, he completed a minor in business and upon graduation moved into the management training program at Stearns and Company. Years later, serving as a store manager, Christian marries Leigh Whitfield and is approached by an old friend, Scott Pierce, with an opportunity to join him in a start-up manufacturing business. Christian and Leigh join their friends -- Scott and his wife, Carol -- as they learn more than they thought imaginable about starting and managing a business.

Then tragedy strikes. Scott is killed in a mysterious accident, the business suffers setbacks, and friendships are stressed to the point of breaking. Christian faces a crisis, professionally and personally, and seeks answers that lead him ultimately to a newfound faith and peace. Christian and Leigh weigh the possibilities of selling their interest in the business and starting over. Meanwhile, the investigation into the death of Scott Pierce uncovers surprises that no one expected... .

Opportunity is a textbook introducing free enterprise and business principles in story form, complete with the suspense and intrigue of a novel. This “novel text” integrates a survey of business disciplines with a biblical worldview. In enlightening ways the book explores the integration of faith and ethics. As the story engages readers, it also teaches principles of free enterprise and business.

“Nothing short of brilliant. David Whitlock has creatively put together a fascinating introductory textbook for college and university business students. In this well written work students will be introduced to all aspects of the business world: from leadership to marketing, from accounting to finance, from economic theory to real world challenges. This exciting pedagogical tool enables students to grasp the big picture, while wrestling with matters of faith, ethical issues, and accountability challenges. I know of no work like it anywhere. I heartily commend it and trust it will find the wide audience it deserves.”

-- Dr. David Dockery, President, Union University

Dr. David Whitlock and Dr. Ronda Credille ‘80 have created an instructor's manual to accompany Whitlock's book that contains course outlines, PowerPoint presentations, student activities and a test bank. Requirements for the manual include Word, PowerPoint and Adobe PDF capability.
Partnership With Tomsk State University

President C. Pat Taylor, Dr. Ronda Credille ‘80, and Dr. Bob Klostermeyer recently traveled to Tomsk, Russia. According to Dr. Taylor, “The officials at Tomsk State University were very welcoming and eager to establish a specific agreement. We successfully met our objective to reach an agreement concerning student exchanges. We have a signed agreement for student exchanges with their Department of Philosophy (Social Studies). It will be our goal to send a group of history/political science students next summer led by Dr. Klostermeyer. Sometime soon we hope to assign two of our ICS students for six months to Tomsk. This will be a great educational opportunity for our students, and they will have the opportunity to share our Christian faith with the students at Tomsk State.”

“Former SBU trustee Ray Leininger has led three mission trips to Tomsk and we have had faculty/staff members on each of the trips,” Dr. Taylor said. “The missions’ teams have taught English classes at Central Baptist Church in Tomsk. Dr. David Whitlock, Dr. Vickie Ellis, Dr. Klostermeyer, and Dr. Credille visited the American Center at Tomsk State last summer and developed a friendship with the Director of the American Center. As a result of their visits, we established an “agreement to agree” approved by the Board of Trustees during the February board meeting.”

The agreement made this summer appears to be the first formal agreement that Tomsk State has established with an American university. Students from Ohio State University and the University of Central Florida have studied on their campus and currently there is a doctoral student from Ohio State working in the American Center. Dr. Taylor said, “The administration, especially the Dean of the Department of Philosophy, appeared to be very pleased with our agreement.”

Dr. Tim DeClue, professor and chair of the computer and information sciences department presented a paper at the Consortium for Computer Science in Colleges on April 13 at Drury University in Springfield. The paper is based on a project his students completed in a freshman software engineering course which resulted in increased learning and student interest in the course.

Assistant professor of computer and information services Dan Neumann has received approval for his doctoral dissertation topic from his doctoral committee: “Paralinguistics and the Perception of Social Presence in Online Learning.” Neumann is expected to complete his Ph.D. in 2008 from Capella University in Minneapolis.

Dr. Susan Debauche ’78, professor and chair of the business administration department, served on a six-person Association of Collegiate Business Schools and Programs Accreditation Team for the business programs in the University of Phoenix system in Phoenix, Ariz., and locations across the United States March 4-10.

The article “Not Just Another Statistic” written by Dr. Ronda Credille ‘80, associate professor of business administration, was published by Andrews University Press in College Faith 3. The College Faith series publishes personal testimonies of university presidents, administrators, and professors related to their experiences as students in higher education.

Dr. David Whitlock, dean of the College of Business and Computer Science and professor of business administration, completed his mentoring assignment with Campbell University in Buies Creek, N.C., through the Association of Collegiate Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP), with a visit to the campus April 1 and 2. He also served as a member of an ACBSP accreditation visit team for a university in March.

John Bryant ’61, associate professor of mathematics, was selected to serve on the eight-member NCAA Division II National Tennis Committee. He served as chair of the committee from 1989 to 1995. The committee makes rules and policies for NCAA Division-II tennis and makes the selection for the 64 team national championships. He will serve as chair of the North Central Regional men’s and women’s tennis committees to the conclusion of the 2007 championships in Orlando.

Dr. Kevin Hopkins, chair and professor of mathematics, presented “Classroom Response Systems” at the annual meeting of Missouri Section of the Mathematical Association of America on March 30-31 at the College of Ozarks. The mathematics department also hosted its annual math contest on Jan. 27 and Feb. 3, on the SBU campus. This event continues to grow in popularity as 624 students participated in the two-day event that targeted students in third through eighth grades.

Earlier this year, Dr. Jim Frost, professor of Intercultural Studies, taught a national perspectives class of pastors and church leaders in Arkansas,
In March, Dr. Kathy Brown, professor of music, served as an adjudicator for high school vocalists in the District Music Contest held in Sedalia.

Dr. Shelley Kilpatrick, assistant professor of psychology, presented a poster session at the Society for Personality and Social Psychology titled, “Teaching What the World Needs Now (Love Sweet Love).” The conference was held in late January in Memphis, Tenn. Also, Dr. Kilpatrick developed a working relationship with the Polk County Drug Court for ongoing evaluation of the effectiveness of their program. It is an opportunity for an SBU student to work on the research associated with such an evaluation.

Pearlene Breshers ‘76, counselor and assistant professor of psychology, and Dr. Kilpatrick took 11 students to Wichita, Kan. for the Great Plains Students’ Psychology Convention. Four SBU students made presentations at the meeting.

Evelyn Mercer ‘71, assistant professor of sociology, and Debbie Gamble, instructor of sociology, attended a conference in Springfield on “Child Sexual Predators: Protecting Children Online.” Mercer also led a campus discussion on child abuse training for mandated reporters, which was given to the majors in church vocations.

Dr. Linda Wooderson ‘78, dean of the Lewis E. Schollian College of Education and Social Sciences and associate professor of health, physical education, and recreation, served on a Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) MOSTEP Team March 3-7 at William Jewell College. She was responsible for writing on William Jewell’s program and curriculum design as well as reviewing their physical education, history, physics, chemistry, and biology education degree programs.

Mel Steele ‘84, assistant professor of business administration at Mountain View and Salem campuses, was named Orien B. Hendrex Distinguished Teacher at the 2007 SBU spring commencement. He received his BS degree from SBU in 1984 and later earned his MBA from Louisiana Tech University in 1986. He's currently working on a Ph.D. from the University of Nebraska. He was hired as full-time faculty in 1990 and teaches a variety of business courses including Business Communications, Principles of Management, Creative Advertising, Statistics, and Professional Selling.

Dr. Martha Baker, BSN program director and professor of nursing, was elected president-elect of National Alaska Native American Indian Nurses Association (NANAINA) and is scheduled to take office as president in October. In addition, she was appointed a member of the National Board of Directors of the National Coalition of Ethnic Minority Nurses (NCEMNA) and attended the third annual NCEMNA board meeting and conference in San Antonio, Texas, March 15-18. She is also a member of the National Advisory Board for Ethnic Minority Fellowship program of American Nurses Association.

Dr. Baker also performed grant reviews for Advanced Education for Health Resources and Services Agency. in Washington, DC, Feb. 12-16, and was a reviewer for the Medical Surgical Review Resource Text for American Nurses Association in March. In addition, she presented a paper, “Cardiovascular Risk Factors Among American Indian Women” at the SBU Nursing Honor Society Research Day, and “Practice, Research and Education: Nursing Leadership in Southwest Missouri” on February 28. She also serves as a member of the Nurses’ Recognition planning committee for a May 7 dinner for southwest Missouri.

Dr. Michael Arnold, associate professor of graduate education, and Dr. Robert Perry, assistant professor of graduate education, recently published about their work with successful Missouri principals in the National Council for Professors of Educational Administration (NCPEA) Connexions Knowledge Base Project. They presented their research findings at the 2007 NCPEA national conference.

Dr. Cathy Beck, professor of physical therapy, and Dr. Steven Lesh, chair and associate professor of physical therapy, attended the American Physical Therapy Association (APTA) Combined Sections conference in Boston, Mass. on Feb. 14-18. Dr. Beck attended clinical education sessions within the APTA pertaining to Academic Clinical Coordinator of Education (ACCE) duties. Dr. Lesh served as a Health Policy and Administration (HPA) platform presentation moderator and attended the following workshops: HPA breakfast and business meeting, Federation of State Boards of Physical Therapy 2008 exam updates, Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospital Organizations updates, using technology, improving leadership, and the neurology residency forum. Dr. Lesh was confirmed as program chair of the Health Policy and Administration section of the American Physical Therapy Association.

On March 30, Edward Walton, acting dean and assistant professor of library services, presented a paper at the Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL) biennial conference. The paper is titled, “Faculty and Student Perceptions of Using E-books in a Small Academic Institution.” The paper presents findings from research conducted at SBU and research conducted during Walton’s Ph.D. coursework. The paper has received significant notoriety, resulting in numerous interview requests from both e-book publishers and potential publishers, such as Duke University Press.

Dr. Bob McGlasson, vice president for information and technology services, participated in a panel discussion at the Greater Ozarks Leadership Development Workshop held at SBU on February 21. He presented a session on the use of technology in workforce development.

Brad Gamble ’82, director of financial aid, is serving as the Missouri president and as the Missouri representative on the Executive Council of the Midwest Association of Financial Aid Administrators.

Sharina Smith, senior director of marketing and communications, is serving on the board for the Association of Women in Communications Springfield Chapter as Student Chapter Liaison.

SAFETY AND SECURITY UPDATE

Mark Grabowski, director of safety and security, and Zeke Clawson ’05, assistant director of safety and security, traveled to the University of Missouri-Rolla (UMR) to participate in a state-wide campus law enforcement summit on May 7. The summit was held to discuss the Virginia Tech tragedy, recent events in Missouri, and to provide input and discussion for the Governor’s Campus Security Task Force.

The agenda included a case study: “Handling a Terrorist Threat-Lessons Learned,” presentation by UMR’s University Police Chief Bill Bleckman and the Rolla Police Department Chief Mark Kearse regarding the incident that closed the UMR campus on February 27, 2007. There were also facilitated discussions on the following topics: “Identifying the student or staff member in crisis,” “safety orientation for students and employees,” “decision-making and communication in a crisis,” and “responding to the crisis.”

Grabowski and Clawson also attended a one-day seminar on “Planning for Emergencies: Strategies for Small Business” hosted by the Safety Council of the Ozarks and the National Safety Council on June 12th in Springfield.

According to Dr. Bob McGlasson, the Information and Technology Services area in cooperation with Safety and Security and Student Life will be implementing the e2Campus messaging system in the fall of 2007. Dr. McGlasson said, “The e2Campus will enable us to instantly communicate with students, faculty and staff – wherever they are via:

- Mobile phone - text messaging
- Web page
- PDA w/wireless connection
- Email
- Pager
- Blackberry device

Notifications are sent by designated administrators and are immediately delivered to recipients. The notification can include basic information and instructions regarding:

- Campus closing
- Terrorist event
- Routine reminders
- Severe weather
- Clery Act event
- Sports scores

Students and employees will have the option of signing up for this service through a webpage interface. Preparation for implementation will be during the summer and implementation will begin during Welcome Week in August 2007. See www.s buniv.edu/safety for additional information.
There’s No Place Like Home

I cannot believe how fast the year is going by! In a few short months it will be October and time for Homecoming 2007! Our theme is “There’s No Place Like Home: Follow the Purple Brick Road” and we have a fun and festive weekend planned for October 5-6, 2007. Watch your mailbox for an invitation and registration forms in the coming weeks. We ask you to register so we can plan better for your arrival.

In an effort to re-connect alumni with one another, we hosted three successful regional alumni reunions this spring, one in Kansas City, one in Bolivar and another in Springfield. A great time was had in each city as alumni had an opportunity to enjoy a meal and fellowship together.

At our Springfield Area Alumni Reunion, there were more than 130 alumni, faculty, staff and their friends and family present at Second Baptist Church in Springfield, Mo. Dr. Taylor shared a brief update about the University and we enjoyed a delicious meal catered by Bandana’s Barbecue.

We also gathered with alumni and friends at First Calvary Baptist Church in Kansas City for the Kansas City Alumni Chapter Annual Spring Banquet. Dr. Stan Norman, vice president for university relations at Southwest Baptist University, shared a devotional and an update of events and activities on campus. The Kansas City Alumni Chapter awarded a $1000 scholarship to Trent Pritchard of Oak Grove, Mo. His brother, Devin Pritchard, who is a newly-graduated music major from SBU, sang two songs. His mother, Julie Pritchard, a 1982 SBU graduate, accompanied him.

Finally, we hosted a Bolivar Area Alumni Reunion in McClelland Dining Facility on our campus. The SBU student group, Higher Ground, performed three songs and one of our forensic students, Nathan Ross, shared a poetry interpretation. Dr. Taylor presented a campus update and Theresa Daniels, director of annual fund, discussed the past success and current goals for the Polk County Community Scholarship fundraising.

Make plans now to return to campus for Homecoming and re-connect with SBU and friends from your college days. If you graduated in 1957, 1967, 1977, 1982 or 1997, it is an especially important year for you; it’s time for your class reunion! Call your friends to make sure they’re coming.

I invite you to check out the upcoming events link on our website, www.sbuniv.edu/alumni, for details on Homecoming and other alumni events. Please check in frequently to see updates with additional details. I am looking at possible sites for regional reunions for the fall and next spring. If you are interested in helping to coordinate a reunion event in your area, please contact me to discuss the details.

If you have questions, please email me at ssummers@sbuniv.edu or call (417) 328-1806. I always appreciate hearing from our alumni and our church friends.

Come home to Bolivar to relive memories and catch up during Homecoming weekend!

Has It Been a Decade?

Recently I was in my parents’ attic doing some cleaning and came across a box with my name on it. What a treasure I had come across! The memories were both bitter and sweet all at once. I sat there and thought about my first day in August for Welcome Week, meeting my first roommate Richelle and her friend Dorothea – who quickly became my best friends, and my emotional goodbye to my parents. I then remembered all the spades tournaments, the concerts, chapels, and the Monopoly games we would play in the SGA offices. I found one or two pictures of my years at SBU. I had even saved a poster done by Jeremy Casper encouraging the student body to “write in” Kenny Goleaner for SGA President!

While my time spent looking through the box was fun and memorable, it would have been twice the fun to share these memories with my friends and classmates. This year marks the ten-year reunion for the class of 1997. I would like to encourage all of you who graduated in 1997 or a semester or two before or after to come back and relive those memories. It will also give us an opportunity to catch up. Some of us have gotten married; some of us have had kids, some have traveled and lived exciting lives in the last ten years. Some of us have lived to testify on how faithful the Lord really is. I can think of no better time than October 5-6 and homecoming for us to do just that - testify to the Lord’s goodness and faithfulness in our lives. I hope to see you there!

Joyce Sells could not have known in 1965 that her cross-country moving days were over. Having lived in Illinois, California and twice in New York, she was accustomed to relocating wherever her husband’s work took their family. But when Dr. Jim Sells was hired as the academic dean of Southwest Baptist College, she found a home. When she and Jim moved to Bolivar with their four children (Jan, Scott, Ben and Jane), their long journey had ended. The Sells family would spend the next 27 years in service at Southwest Baptist University.

Soon after settling into their new home, Joyce began her duties as a homemaker, church member, busy mother of four, and an active community member. When Jim became the 21st president of Southwest Baptist College in 1968, Joyce added the unpaid duties of “first lady” on top of her already hectic schedule. Her life now had the added responsibilities of serving as the official hostess of college dinners, receptions, Christmas parties, trustee dinners, and every conceivable type of social event common to a university. Joyce had the gift of hospitality, and she possessed a grace for working with all types of people in all types of situations. These traits and her other gifts made her a natural for her service as first lady. Her background had prepared her well for the many roles she would fill.

With her children spending more time in school, Joyce devoted her keen intellect to the pursuit of her education. In 1975 she earned the bachelor of arts in education from Southwest Baptist College. She taught English as an adjunct professor at SBU and also substituted in the Bolivar schools.

Joyce Maola Wayne was born on July 31, 1930, in East St. Louis, Illinois, to Ray and Gladys Wayne. Joyce became a believer in Jesus Christ at the Rosemont Baptist Church in East St. Louis and was active in the youth and music ministries. She graduated from East St. Louis Senior High School and then worked for a St. Louis law firm.

One of Joyce’s fellow members of Rosemont Baptist Church was a young man originally from Sesser, Illinois. He had lived in East St. Louis for many years, and he also had graduated from East St. Louis Senior High School. On June 2, 1951, Joyce was married to Jim Lee Sells.

Shortly after their wedding, the young couple moved to Carbondale, Illinois, where Jim began to pursue a degree at Southern Illinois University. During this time, Joyce worked at the Academic Dean’s office. Jim’s educational plans were interrupted for a period of time by the Korean conflict. The Sells were eventually able, however, to return to Carbondale, and Jim completed his programs of study and begin his career in higher education. During this period, Jim and Joyce were active in a small church, and this experience played an important role in shaping their continued faithfulness to local churches and to Southern Baptist efforts.

The Sells next moved to New York where Jim would earn his doctorate at Columbia University. Jim taught and coached, and Joyce continued her home and church work. By this time they were raising a family of two children, Jan and Scott. They also helped establish the very first Southern Baptist Church in the area where they lived.

The growing family moved in 1958 to Davis, California. Dr. Sells held the position of head basketball coach and associate supervisor of health, physical education and recreation at the University of California-Davis. While living in Davis, Jim and Joyce helped establish the first Southern Baptist Church in that city.

Five years later, they moved to Buffalo, New York, where Jim served as the chair of the department of physical education and recreation at State University College.
College. As had been their practice at their other residences, Jim and Joyce helped establish a new Baptist church.

During her years of service at SBU, Joyce seemed to prefer staying out of the limelight. She did, however, work tirelessly on many special projects in addition to her regular duties. For example, in the spring of 1982, Joyce, along with Elizabeth Crozier and Esther “Mom” Farris, began to explore the need to preserve historical items related to SBU. At the meeting of the SBU Women’s Club in May 1982, a committee was established to find a location, draw up a mission, and set up a plan of operation to accomplish the goal. Because of the diligence and hard work of this committee, the Southwest Baptist University Historical Gallery held its first open house on November 10, 1982, in Muirhead Hall.

Joyce and several other key members of the SBU Women’s Club poured countless hours into collecting, cleaning, tagging, and displaying historical materials for the Gallery. In an interview for the May 3, 1985, issue of the Omnibus, Joyce said, “Don’t let it be an old, dark museum—use it.” She noted that they named the facility, “SBU Historical Gallery,” not “museum.” “We didn’t use the word ‘museum’ because of the connotations.” As Joyce stated, the clear intention for the Gallery was to be a “workable part of the University” and to be a dynamic resource, not a static depository.

Because so much of her work was behind-the-scenes, a casual observer might have missed her many contributions as wife, mother, friend, hostess, and first lady. During her time in Bolivar, Joyce invested her life in various activities, including Meals-on-Wheels, the citizen’s committee for the school, and the “Sound of Music” high school choir trip to Austria. She was also a faithful member of First Baptist Church, Bolivar, where she served with distinction as a Sunday School teacher and as church librarian. One of the highlights of her tenure as church librarian was her effort to automate the church library and make it accessible on the Internet.

Joyce M. Sells was well-known to her friends and to the community for her devotion to her Lord and to her family. Her quiet strength and servant’s heart made a lasting impression upon the lives of those who knew and loved her. In her eulogy at the funeral of Joyce, Dr. Pat Baker lovingly remembered her friend with the following words: “Inside she was a spiritual giant. First Peter 3:4 reads, ‘Be beautiful inside, in your heart, with the lasting charm of a gentle and quiet spirit which is so precious to God.’ What better description could there be of Joyce’s life.”
